Detectives on hunt for killer

Man dies in hospital Thursday night, police tactical and K9 units called into Beaumaris

Beaumaris residents say gunshots rang out in the north side neighbourhood Thursday leaving one man dead and homicide detectives searching for suspects. Police were called to the scene just before 4 p.m. and found a man being treated by paramedics for undisclosed injuries. The victim later died from his wounds in hospital. Police tactical and K9 units were called in. It is not known if the suspect and the victim knew each other.

Group of seven vying for votes

- Seven candidates campaigning for mayor's seat in Monday's municipal election
- Full mayoral forums available online on city's website at www.edmonton.ca

Edmonton voters have seven candidates to choose from before the polls close on the municipal election Monday evening.

Current Mayor Stephen Mandel is hoping for a third term and is counting on his experience in the top seat and his term as councillor for Ward 1, along with 30 years of private sector experience, to keep him in his job.

Mandel

Bonar

Daryl Bonar is willing to fight to keep that from happening. Bonar, a member of the Canadian Forces, feels he has a fresh perspective and new energy to offer Edmontonians.

Dorward

Dowling

David Dorward is bringing his experience as a candidate in the provincial election in 2008 to this year's municipal campaign. Dorward is an active member of his community, including his involvement in local sports organizations.

Dave Dowling won't be letting the pressure of the day get to him on Monday.

Dromarsky

Ligertwood

Dowling has experience running in civic, provincial and federal elections.

Dan Dromarsky was born and raised in Edmonton and relied on social media to engage people during his campaign. He said he is passionate about getting more Edmontonians to the polls this election.

Bob Ligertwood has a background in agriculture and heavy industry and currently owns a small neighbourhood coffee shop with his wife.

And finally there is Andrew Lineker, an Edmonton native who has a longstanding interest in provincial and civic politics.

Delay in sentencing Pocklington

Sentencing for Peter Pocklington on a perjury charge in California has been delayed because his lawyer was late filing paperwork in the case.

The former owner of the Oilers was in court on Thursday morning for sentencing, but U.S. District Judge Virginia Phillips put the case over until Oct. 27 to give her time to review the 78-page document.

Phillips admonished lawyer Brent Romney for filing the pre-sentencing paperwork only a few days ago.

Outside court, Romney said he knew he filed late, but wanted to give the judge the most up-to-date information about Pocklington's co-operation with authorities.

Pocklington pleaded guilty last May to a single perjury count for making false statements and oaths in his bankruptcy case.

A plea deal suggested that Pocklington serve probation and six months of home detention with electronic monitoring.

The 68-year-old must also make full restitution after working with the Internal Revenue Service to determine his income tax liability between 2006 and 2008. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

On the streets, hoping to send a clear message

- Police presence a public display
- Divert Disorder wraps up Saturday

DUSTIN BLUMHAGEN
EDMONTON@METRONEWS.CA

The Edmonton Police Service's downtown division is running an awareness campaign about crime in the Boyle Street and McCauley area, as part of a larger campaign called Divert Disorder.

By flooding the area with marked police resources and participating community partners like Hope Mission and Mustard Seed, they hope to decrease disorder.

"A lot of groups work in the same area as us but stay in the background," said Sgt. Chris Hayduk. "We want agencies to complement each other."

Divert Disorder will be active in the area until Saturday. Uniformed EPS members will be visible in the neighbourhood, providing public education to residents, as well as information for those in need.

"Our focus isn't high crime rate, it's crime and disorder," Hayduk said.

The public display is intended to send a message to criminals and law-abiding citizens in the community. By increasing their presence in the area, they hope to disrupt the criminals' normal routines.

The program

- Divert Disorder will run throughout 2010 and will focus on high-risk areas of the city like Oliver and Alberta Avenue.
- This project is the first of its kind in the area, partnering EPS and various organizations to combat a common problem.

Returning to Edmonton for a second year, Timeraiser brings together volunteers and artists through a unique concept.

Attendees will have the opportunity to bid on artwork from a variety of local artists, but instead of cash, they will pay a minimum of 20 volunteer hours to a local organization. The winning bidders will have a year to complete their hours, at which time they will gain possession of their piece of artwork.

Since the initial event in 2004, the six Canadian Timeraiser events have generated more than 73,500 volunteer hours and invested $389,000 in the careers of upcoming artists.

The grassroots initiative was started by a group of friends in Toronto that wanted to make it easier to discover relevant volunteer opportunities.

The Edmonton event begins at 7 p.m. Saturday. The event features a silent auction with food and drinks, followed by a live performance from Amy van Keeken's Rock and Roll Sing-A-Long.

4,000
Organizers hope to reach their goal of 4,000 donated hours.

A number of local agencies will be soliciting for volunteers at the event, including Youth Emergency Shelter Society and Glenrose Rehabilitation Hospital.

Métis institute to receive $61 million

Officials from The Métis Nation of Alberta (MNA) met with Laurie Hawn, Edmonton Centre MP parliament secretary to the Minister of Defence, Thursday to announce a $61-million grant to a new project entitled the Rupertsland Institute.

"The government takes very seriously our commitment to Aboriginal Peoples, Métis, First Nations, and Inuit," Hawn said.

"I think $61 million will go an awful long way to help Métis people, especially in this area."

The institute will develop and deliver programming and services to the Alberta Métis population in relation to the labour market and education assistance.

The MNA has been offering assistance programs for the past 15 years in these areas. The ability of the institute to offer more advanced services will stimulate growth in the aboriginal community.

"I'm a product of the Métis Nation's initiatives, as well as the federal government," said Adam Letourneau, chair of the Rupertsland Institute.

"The main initiative is to help Métis people get to parity with the rest of the population, especially in terms of education and ultimately as members of the workforce."

Escape the Fate seek to fill void with new album

Escape the Fate opening for Bullet for My Valentine Sunday Self-titled album will be released Nov. 2

When Escape the Fate won a contest to open for My Chemical Romance, it seemed like they were offered an opportunity most bands only dream of.

But they didn't rise to fame with Justin Bieber-like ease.

Shortly after the release of their debut album their lead singer was arrested, leaving the future of the band in question. But they carried on against the odds, releasing their sophomore album with a new vocalist, Craig Mabbitt.

On the eve of the release of their latest CD, Escape the Fate have moved to a major label to release what could be their breakthrough album.

"You don't even know what this album is about to do. There's something missing right now in music," says Mabbitt. "Even Lady Gaga, who is great at what she does, does she serve those kids in high school who are pissed off? Does Nickelback? They don't fill that void."

When asked about their slot on their upcoming Edmonton show, he cheekily asks, "Are we opening for them or are they closing for us?" But his laid-back demeanor counters any claims the guys are suffering from inflated rock-star egos. ● DUSTIN BLUMHAGEN

Children's Mental Health

Spotlight on Children's Mental Health ~ By Dr. David Wolfe
Chair of the RBC Children's Mental Health Project

Most parents have an uncanny ability to quickly (and accurately) assess the severity of their child's physical ailments.

In most cases, a quick 'once over' and a few pointed questions provide the information we need to make a decision.

But how good are we at identifying and assessing the nature of the problem when it affects our child's mind rather than their body? The answer, unfortunately, is "not as good as we need to be".

Mental illness is often mistakenly perceived as being an 'adult problem'. In fact, there's a long, troubling history of suppression of children's mental health issues in our society. Today, thankfully, we recognize that the mental health problems of children and adolescents are a frequently occurring and significant social concern worldwide.

There are currently 1.2 million Canadian children and youth who are affected by mental illness. And recent research suggests one in five children and adolescents will suffer from a mental illness of sufficient severity to cause significant distress and impaired functioning. And there's mounting evidence that many, if not most, lifetime psychiatric disorders will first appear in childhood or adolescence.

While there are numerous individual disorders encompassed by the term 'children's mental illness', they typically fall into the following broad categories: behavioural and emotional disorders.

Virtually all children will experience brief periods of behavioural or emotional issues as they grow. It's part of life. But when these problems begin to interfere with how our children function at home or at school, it may be time to take a closer look. There are some basic questions we can ask ourselves as parents. Is this behaviour disruptive to our child? How long has it been occurring? Would this be considered 'normal' for their age group?

The quality of children's mental health treatments and services continues to improve. Unfortunately, many children who might benefit from these services are falling through the cracks because of the stigma attached to children's mental health issues. The bottom line is this: If we want to improve the rates of children receiving proper care, we – as a society – need to overcome the stigma currently associated with children's mental illness. Ignoring the symptoms only leads to negative implications. Early intervention is key to creating positive outcomes. And overcoming the stigma is an important part of that process.

Coat holds clues to September slaying

Police believe coat belongs to person of interest in the death of high school student Emmanuel Amoah

The investigation into the death of Emmanuel Amoah, whose remains were found Sept. 14 on the city's south side, continues and police are hoping images of a coat will help lead them to a suspect.

Police spokesperson Karen Carlson said the coat did not belong to the victim. "The location where it was found is being withheld at this particular time," Carlson said.

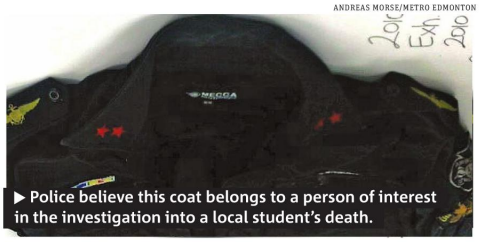

"It belongs to some one of interest to the investigation."

The black, waste-length, thick, cotton coat is currently being forensically examined and investigators are awaiting test results.

Amoah was a student at Centre High and was last seen after leaving school on the afternoon of Wednesday, Sept. 1. Anyone who may have information about this coat is asked to contact the Edmonton Police Service at 780-423-4567. Anonymous information can be directed to Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477 (TIPS) or online at tipsubmit.com/start.htm.

Chile's 33 rescued miners were itching to reunite with families and sleep in their own beds Thursday.

But after spending the night in hospital they had to wait — examinations by doctors came first.

Meanwhile, on the day after the 23-hour rescue that kept the world spellbound, relatives were organizing welcome-home parties — and trying to organize an avalanche of celebrity functions and job offers. Among them:

▶ Spain's Real Madrid football team invited the 33 to attend a game.

▶ A Greek mining company offered to fly each one, with a companion, for a week's vacation in the Mediterranean.

▶ Chile's football federation said it would offer a job with its youth teams to Franklin Lobos, a former national team player who drove a taxi to make ends meet before he was caught in the Aug. 5 mine collapse.

▶ Soccer teams in Manchester and Buenos Aires want the miners in their stadiums.

▶ Hearing that miner Edison Pena jogged regularly in the tunnels below the collapsed rock, the New York City marathon invited him to participate in next month's race.

Doctors said three of the men could be discharged from hospital as early as Thursday evening, with others following Friday and over the weekend. Then they'll have to "find their equilibrium and take care of themselves," said hospital chaplain Rev. Luis Lopez.

Protesters stay away from speech at elite Vancouver gourmet dinner

It wasn't a book club event for your average hockey mom.

Sarah Palin scored the attention of Vancouver's elite at an invitation-only gourmet dinner to discuss her memoir Going Rogue: An American Life.

But the former Alaska governor was missing her usual gaggle of protesters during the visit.

The well-heeled crowd merely ambled past a single demonstrator on the way into the Vancouver Club Ballroom — and his protests weren't even aimed at Palin, but Canada's poor record on Kyoto.

But those who'd shelled out $500 a pop for the exclusive chance at chit-chatting with the one-time Republican vice-presidential candidate didn't want to hear any negatives about Palin.

U.S. high court won't review death row case

Canadian Ronald Smith once requested death penalty but changed his mind ◐ Been fighting to stay alive ever since ◐ Clemency petition to be filed in Montana

The fate of the only Canadian on death row in the United States is now in the balance after his final legal avenue of appeal was slammed shut by the U.S. Supreme Court.

The top court has declined to review the case of Ronald Smith of Red Deer, Alta., who was convicted in 1983 for the murder of two young Montana men.

"I'm always optimistic but also it was not unexpected," said Smith's longtime lawyer Greg Jackson in a phone interview with The Canadian Press.

"I'm concerned for Ron. Obviously I've got to know him well over the past 25 years and in a sense it's like we've grown up together. I care for him deeply and the thought of him being executed — it's sobering."

The case will now be sent to courts in Montana at which time a new execution date will be set.

Smith was convicted of fatally shooting two cousins, Harvey Madman Jr. and Thomas Running Rabbit, while he was high on drugs and alcohol.

He refused a plea deal that would have seen him avoid death row but spend his life in prison. Three weeks later, he pleaded guilty. He asked for and was given a death sentence.

But he later had a change of heart and has been on a legal roller-coaster for the last 25 years. He has already been sentenced to death four times and had the order overturned on three occasions.

Once the execution date is set, a petition for clemency will be filed with the Montana Board of Pardons and Parole. A public notice will be issued and a hearing will be held to give both sides a chance to make their arguments.

The board will then issue a recommendation to either grant clemency or reject it.

"The decision in death sentence cases is not final. It is referred to the governor regardless of whether the board proposes clemency or their opinion is to deny clemency. So ultimately it does go to the governor," Jackson said.

"You know it's been a long road, a lot of appeals to the state, a lot of appeals to the federal courts. We can now look and say that the state court appeals have been exhausted, federal court appeals have been exhausted and this is the final option."

Democratic Gov. Brian Schweitzer has suggested he is still undecided on what he will do.

"You're not talking to a governor who is jubilant about these things," he said from his office in Helena earlier this month. "It feels like you're carrying more than the weight of an Angus bull on your shoulders."

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's role

Canadian courts forced Stephen Harper's Conservative government to seek clemency for Ronald Smith last year after Ottawa initially balked at stepping in.

- The Canadian government also has the option to make an argument at the clemency hearing. "They certainly as an interested party would have every right to be heard," said Greg Jackson, Smith's lawyer.
- Those appearing at the clemency hearing will have the opportunity to present witnesses, exhibits and testimony.

No appeal for Bedard

- Supreme Court rejects Olympian's bid to overturn 2007 conviction
- Bedard won two gold medals in biathlon in 1994, bronze in 1992

The Supreme Court of Canada won't hear an appeal from Myriam Bedard.

The court has rejected her bid to overturn a 2007 conviction for violating a child-custody order.

The three-time Olympic medal winner was given a conditional discharge and two years probation for taking her daughter to the United States in violation of a custody agreement with her ex-husband.

Last March, the Quebec Court of Appeal dismissed her appeal, leaving the Supreme Court as her last resort. As usual in leave applications, the high court gave no reasons for rejecting the case.

Biomass project gets OK in Nova Scotia

The Nova Scotia Utility and Review Board has approved a $208-million biomass project proposed by the province's power utility and the owners of a Port Hawkesbury paper mill.

The board says Newpage Port Hawkesbury and Nova Scotia Power can proceed with plans to burn waste wood for energy using a massive steam boiler at the Newpage mill, but it has applied several conditions.

The board says the utility won't be allowed to pass on any contract price increases to ratepayers. The board also said that should the project fail, any associated costs can't be passed on to consumers.

Harper blames UN snub on 'secret votes'

But Canada will stick to the principles it holds dear, he says Freedom, justice and human rights are key

TREVOR HAGAN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is dismissing Canada's failure to land a seat on the United Nations Security Council as the outcome of "secret votes."

Harper says Canada will stick to promoting values such as freedom, justice and human rights.

"Our engagement internationally is based on the principles that this country holds dear; it is not based on popularity," Harper said.

He was speaking in eastern Quebec two days after Canada withdrew its bid to rejoin the powerful UN Security Council.

Tuesday's setback came after it became clear Portugal was on its way to defeating Canada to claim the second of two available spots in the UN's most exclusive and coveted club.

Harper's communications director, Dimitri Soudas, and Foreign Affairs Minister Lawrence Cannon have said Canada lost out because Liberal Leader Michael Ignatieff questioned whether the country had earned a spot on the council.

But the prime minister did not mention Ignatieff.

Harper did not elaborate on what he meant by "secret votes," although Cannon and Soudas did say some of the support that had been anticipated had failed to materialize in the voting.

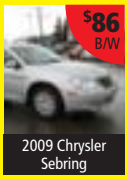

Canada first joined the Security Council in 1948 and held a seat for a two-year term five more times, most recently in 1999-2000.

Yahoo shares climb

Investors were running up the price of Yahoo shares yesterday, after a report saying AOL and a group of private equity firms may bid for the web company.

Other people's money

DAVID DESCÔTEAUX

Imagine the scene. Unemployed for months, you must now hand over your house keys to the bank.

HISTORY'S NO. 1 FRAUD?

Not one, but three different bank representatives knock on your door. Each of them has in hand a deed for your house. After verification, the three documents are … fake! And no one knows who owns your house.

We thought we'd seen it all from Wall Street bankers. But foreclosuregate might just set a new record for financial fraud — and plunge us all into a brand new crisis.

From 2004 to 2007, the big U.S. banks granted millions of dollars of mortgages. Even a cleaning lady earning $10 an hour could get a $500,000 shanty on credit. The banks were raking it in by regrouping mortgages and reselling them as financial products to investors, like pension plans.

Now, when you're trading thousands of mortgages a day, it becomes costly and time-consuming to visit the notary for each one. The banks therefore created their own computer system (called MERS) to register the sales and purchases.

Today, millions of Americans are losing their jobs and must hand over their house keys to banks. There's just one problem: The MERS registrations contain few details and are worthless in the eyes of several judges who authorize foreclosures. To reclaim the houses, banks must present notarized deeds. Unable to find the original documents — destroyed or lost — several banks seem to have decided to fabricate false documents. And had them authorized by lawyers without scruples (one of whom admitted to authorizing 10,000 in a single month). The result: A total mess. Several banks find themselves trying to repossess the same house, and homeowners are being evicted when they shouldn't be.

"Several banks seem to have decided to fabricate false documents."

It gets worse. According to a growing number of analysts, if the banks created the MERS system, it wasn't to save a few cents. It was to resell on the sly — to investors like your pension plan — tons of fraudulent mortgages. Without sufficient documentation, the buyers of these products could not accurately verify their quality. We're talking about a major, countrywide fraud.

If the facts — which are still piling up daily — confirm this theory, the big banks will face a mountain of lawsuits. They will also lose their rights to thousands of homes. American financial expert Janet Tavakoli talks about a possible $700-billion bill. In other words: Bankruptcy for several big banks.

American taxpayers will never agree to bail out bankers yet again. Especially not in this context.

Such incompetence, if coupled with criminal intent, deserves only one thing: That those banks be allowed to fail — in orderly fashion — for once and for all. Which is what should have happened two years ago.

Amazon.com wins fight for online patent

Federal court rules site can patent 'one-click payment'

Internet retailer Amazon.com has won a fight to patent its online payment system in Canada that allows shoppers to make purchases with one click of their computer mouse.

The Federal Court decision closes a chapter in Amazon's fight to protect what it calls its "one-click" technology from possible illegal use in Canada.

"The Patent Act is not static; it must be applied in ways that recognize changes in technology such as the move from the Industrial Age to the electronic one of today," Justice Michael Phelan wrote in a decision released yesterday.

The court overturned a decision by Canada's patent office, which didn't allow Amazon's "one-click" payment method to be patented.

While the decision doesn't affect shoppers, it means the Commissioner of Patents will have to take a second look at Amazon's patent application.

If approved, the patent will protect its "one-click" concept so that it can't be used by competitors unless they license it from Amazon. Amazon could not be immediately reached for comment.

Patent expert Alexander Poltorak said Amazon wants to protect its market share.

"The way you protect your market share is by patenting whatever aspect of technology that you develop and preventing competitors from emulating this," said Poltorak, chairman and CEO of U.S.-based General Patent Corp.

5 MINUTES WITH: DAWNA FRIESEN

She's the new face of Global National and broadcaster Dawna Friesen is making history in the process. Friesen, a former foreign correspondent with NBC, became Global National's news anchor and executive editor last month — making her Canada's first full-time female news anchor. Friesen is taking her newscast on the road and Metro caught up with her in Halifax.

There's been a lot of fanfare leading to you taking on this position — your face on billboards. How do you feel about this attention?
My mother called me on the weekend and said, "You're not going to be able to hide anywhere now. Everybody has seen your face" — as if I was on the verge of committing some criminal act and now I can't (laughing). But no, it's a bit daunting, all of that, and that's not my favourite part of the job — put it that way. It kind of goes with the territory, but I've seen enough of myself now. And my head really isn't that big.

What about being the first female national news anchor in Canada?
I haven't played that really big. That to me is kind of neither here nor there, which I know maybe isn't the answer people want to hear.

Do you think expectations are the same if you were a man?
I think there's probably more scrutiny about the way I look than there is about Peter (Mansbridge) or Lloyd (Robertson).

How does that make you feel?
It's annoying. I wish it didn't happen. It has nothing to do with the way I do my work, or conduct myself, or how good I am at what I do. It bugs me.

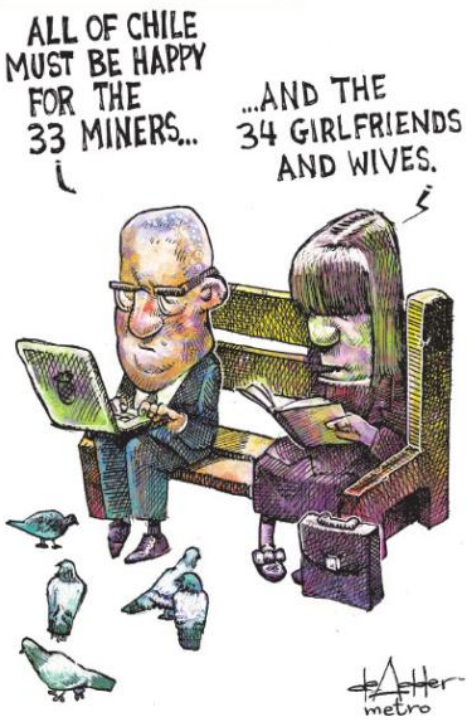

When you have a couple hours to yourself, how do you unwind?
Read. I'd like to read more than I do now … I'd (also) like to get back into cross-country skiing. Just more outdoor stuff.

When you and your partner Tom Kennedy (of CTV News) sit down for dinner, is the news discussed all the time?
No way (laughing). It's the last thing. And we hardly watch TV, either.

Protect children: Groups

Worth mentioning

Austria should stop detaining children and halt the deportations of well-integrated foreign families that are denied asylum, Amnesty International and three other groups urged Thursday.

The country also should better protect the rights of non-Austrian minors and become more lenient about allowing young asylum seekers and their parents to stay on humanitarian grounds, the organizations wrote in a letter to lawmakers.

The appeal comes just days after two eight-year-old twins were taken into custody with their father in an early morning raid and deported back to their native Kosovo. Their mother, who is in psychiatric care, stayed behind. The four had lived in Austria since 2004 but were expelled after being denied asylum and refusing to leave on their own.

The family's plight has sparked widespread debate and protest, with critics calling the deportations heartless and inhumane. Interior Minister Maria Fekter defended it, saying she was following the rule of law and the children were with their father. She has since softened her stance slightly, acknowledging Wednesday that pictures of the detention "greatly moved her."

Metro Minute with Homeless Connect

Homeless people deserve a day to be pampered. A Homeless Connect event takes place Sunday at the Shaw Conference Centre.

Many homeless people cannot afford luxuries like regular haircuts, so this event allows them to experience services that would not normally be available to them. Free services available include mental health assessments, library services, foot care, immunizations, dental care, tax preparation, laundry, and housing information.

The event is intended to raise awareness of the issue. The event is acting in support of The Edmonton Committee to End Homelessness.

▶ Getting to act alongside her friend Marc Jordan, left, helped convince Olivia Newton-John to take the role in Score: A Hockey Musical.

A legend returns to musicals after 30 years

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

Although she sang with John Travolta in Grease, danced with Gene Kelly in Xanadu and recently featured her hit Let's Get Physical on Glee, Olivia Newton-John hasn't appeared in a full-on musical on the big screen for 30 years. That will change this weekend when she will be seen playing an overprotective hockey mom in Score: A Hockey Musical.

Director Michael McGowan wanted John, but didn't think he'd be able to get the Australian superstar, who now makes her home in Florida, to come north to shoot the film.

"She's funny and she doesn't take herself seriously," he said, "but for her to say, 'This is the film, a hockey musical shot in Toronto, in February, seemed virtually impossible."

When asked why chose to do this film she laughed and said, "Because it was fun. Marc Jordan (who plays her husband in the film) is my friend and he is married to Amy Sky, one of my best friends who also produces my music, so why not?"

Shooting in Toronto in frigid February temperatures, she says, was "an experience," but the working with the cast and crew made it worthwhile. "My memory of the movie was having fun," she adds.

Working with her friend Jordan, who is best known as a solo singer-songwriter (he wrote the hit Rhythm of My Heart for Rod Stewart), caused to her to occasionally get the giggles so badly she could barely contain herself.

"I was really embarrassed in the end because you can break up a couple of times but you have to know when to stop, but Marc was just so hysterical."

Ditto her director. "He is marvelous," she says. "He has such a quirky sense of humour which fits in with mine really well. On the set he was very relaxed; he's worked with everyone before so it was a real family atmosphere. There was no stress, there was no, 'Oh he's yelling at you.'"

She saves her highest praise, however, for her young co-stars, Noah Reid and Allie MacDonald who play her son and his best friend. When asked if she passed along any tips to the neophytes she said,

"They are both really gifted. I probably should have asked them for hints rather than the other way around."

"It's a lot of good fun, but the peace message is good I think. I'm not one for violence and was brought up in the same kind of family as (the character of home-schooled-pacifist-hockey-prodigy-Farley Gordon). Maybe not quite as stringent but my father was a professor and parents were academic and peace was a big thing for my mother. It wasn't important to win, it was important to play fair, so (Score: A Hockey Musical) kind of rung true for me."

Red's great cast brings plenty of fun, action

Red
Genre: Action/Comedy
Director: Robert Schwentke
Stars: Bruce Willis, Morgan Freeman, John Malkovich, Helen Mirren, Morgan Freeman

There's a moment in the first half of Red, Bruce Willis' delightful new shoot-em-up, when the chaos on screen reaches a fevered, frenzied high point as retired CIA agents Frank (Willis) and loose cannon Marvin (John Malkovich) dance their way through a fire fight in a Louisiana shipyard, ending with a ludicrous showdown involving a rocket launcher.

It's 100 per cent pure fun. Unfortunately, the movie can't keep up the frenetic pace after that and soon has to stop and catch its breath, as if the film itself were one of the retirees it features.

Whatever points Red loses for slowing its pace, it more than makes up for the with the introduction of perhaps its biggest selling point: Dame Helen Mirren with an assault rifle. As a former British agent now taken to gardening, Mirren is obviously enjoying herself here, as is the rest of the cast. And despite the fact that Willis and Mary-Louise Parker are the focus, Mirren's relationship with an ex-KGB agent (Brian Cox) is the real heart of the movie.

The only problem with Red, really, is that Willis, at 55, just doesn't look like an old man, which is probably exactly what the actor wants you to think.

Waiting for "Superman"
Genre: Documentary
Director: Davis Guggenheim
Star: Geoffrey Canada

In 2006, Davis Guggenheim's An Inconvenient Truth not only won the Best Documentary Oscar but it helped an entire generation understand and start thinking about environmental change. Now the filmmaker hopes Waiting for "Superman" has the same effect on a deplorable American school system that has been reduced to forcing some children to literally play lotteries for spots in decent learning facilities. Like An Inconvenient Truth, the film is a heavy mix of stats and information but with the charismatic personalities of school reformer Geoffrey Canada and the five innocent children that Guggenheim follows through to their fateful lottery day, the message is clear.

Amusing without 3-D

Jackass 3D
Genre: Comedy
Director: Jeff Tremaine
Stars: Johnny Knoxville, Bam Margera, Steve-O
●●½

Three-D would seem tailor-made for the guys from Jackass.

When the technology is used for its funniest and most entertaining purposes, as it was recently in Piranha 3-D," it's all about the wild, gratuitous gimmicks. I don't need to be immersed in Pandora; I want stuff flung at me from the screen.

Johnny Knoxville and Co., who are constantly outdoing themselves with crazy and creative pranks and stunts, would seem to be just the right guys to do that sort of thing. But very little occurs in their latest movie, Jackass 3D, that wouldn't have sufficed in 2-D.

Sure, there's an amusing and effective bit involving archery with a sex toy rather than an arrow. Steve-O and Dave England play tetherball with a beehive — dressed in nothing but furry bear hats and tighty-whities — and it feels as if the worked-up insects are swarming around us, too. Weiner baseball, which is exactly what it sounds like, is good for a laugh because it's presented in artful slow motion (and man, is there a lot of penis in this movie).

But more often than not, this third installment in the franchise, directed as always by Jeff Tremaine, doesn't take full advantage of its visual potential. A Jet-Ski stunt Knoxville performs in a swimming pool, which is featured prominently in the trailers, is a bit of a let down, for example.

Jackass 3D — and the group's entire oeuvre, if you will - is at its best when it's about these guys playing well-orchestrated tricks on each other and the world at large. Getting reactions out of strangers always works: In the most effective example, Knoxville — wearing old-man makeup that makes him look like Ted Turner — makes out in public with a much younger girl who's supposed to be his 19-year-old granddaughter.

It's Kind Of A Funny Story should be a dark comedy combining the voices of cult comic Zach Galifianakis and the directors of Half Nelson. To an extent it is, albeit on the sidelines. Galifianakis creates a touching and hilarious portrait of a lifelong depressive, but unfortunately the film focuses on a suicidal teen learning how crazy the world is during a week-long stay in a psyche ward.

Genre: Drama
Director: John Curran
Stars: Robert De Niro, Edward Norton, Mila Jovovich

Stone is a muddled, but intriguing prison drama about a burned out corrections officer, a manipulative con with a conscience, and his femme fatale-esque wife desperate to get a release. This movie should have been a smart dirty thriller, but is teased out into an almost theological think piece by director John Curran. The approach works wonders for the cast, with DeNiro giving a thoughtful if somewhat lazy performance.

The Yale graduate's slight, gawky frame is not exactly what you have in mind when you think criminal and yet his portrayals of people on life's fringe's have earned him Oscar nominations and come to define his career.

In his first big screen part Norton played the dual role of altar boy Aaron and his alter ego, the psychotic Roy in the film Primal Fear. CRIMINAL RESUMÉ ing to get out on parole in Stone which opens on Friday.

auditioned for the role, he tricked the film's director into thinking he shared an eastern Kentucky background with Aaron by speaking with a twang — which he picked by watching Coal Miner's Daughter.

"The most I had to offer was anonymity," he later said. "The potency of the revelation about who my character really was in that film was in part reliant on the fact that people had absolutely no prior knowledge of me."

Next time behind bars he pulled a De Niro, and in American History X physically transformed to play the role of a white supremacist sent away for murder. In jail he learns the error of his ways and works to help his brother from going down the same, wrong-headed path. "I knew this guy was going to have to be really physically fearsome," he says, "and that's not something anyone would peg me for. [He's] defined by rage and this body he's created is the physical manifestation of that."

In this weekend's Stone he stars as an arsonist who will do anything, including using his wife as bait, to earn parole. Despite having played convicts in the past, Norton was keen to bring an extra layer of realism to this role so he met with actual prisoners to learn how they spoke.

"Their language is fantastic. At one point, one of these guys was telling me about a fight and how he had to just let it happen and not fight. (He said,) 'When you're short time, you have to be a vegetarian.' I said, 'What?' He said, 'Vegetarian, you can't have beef with nobody.'"

Clooney meets Obama

Actor George Clooney says he still gets a thrill when he meets with President Barack Obama — but to his father that kind of thing is old hat.

Clooney and Obama met on Tuesday to discuss ways of averting a potential civil war in Sudan. They've had similar meetings in the past. The first time, Clooney had a photo of him and the president enlarged and sent to his father, journalist Nick Clooney, saying, "Not bad for a kid from Kentucky."

Clooney told The Associated Press, "My Dad sent me back a picture of him in the Oval Office interviewing Gerald Ford and he's like, you know, 'Stand in line, pal!'"

Clooney seemed at home speaking with the president and other Washington officials this week, but said he has no interest in running for office himself. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

6 Best Eastwood flicks

With Halloween coming, it's time for the horror to take over this week because ... well, because he's Clint Eastwood.

What are you gonna do, say no to the man?

Actually, Eastwood was kind enough to take a few moments to select his five favourite movies from the dozens he's directed; his latest, Hereafter, opens this weekend. But because we're feeling so charitable, we let him pick six, listed below alphabetically along with his comments and insights into each one of his works.

Clint Eastwood has won two Oscars for best director and been nominated two other times.

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BIRD
1988

- Eastwood's biopic on jazz legend Charlie Parker: "It was a nice story about someone whose musicianship I admired so greatly. It was a good script on the analysis of the self-destructiveness of personality: people who insist on sinking into the abyss. Success, being idolized by other musicians — none of it was enough."

LETTERS FROM IWO JIMA
2006

- One of two Second World War films Eastwood released in 2006: "I was proud of Letters from Iwo Jima. I got the idea of doing it while doing Flags of Our Fathers, which is about the American invasion of the island. But the film pointed out what it must have been like to have been one of the defenders of the island — to have been there, and been told not to plan on returning home. What a difficult request to make of people. Also, the Japanese soldiers were facing certain annihilation. They never gave up hope. A lot of them would have loved to have been out of the war and home, just like soldiers from any nation."

MILLION DOLLAR BABY
2004

- Starring Hilary Swank as a boxer and Eastwood as her reluctant trainer: "It appealed to me because it was a story regarding family — a search for the daughter he never had a relationship with, and the search for the father that was no longer there for her. They were both sort of reticent, and ended up putting themselves through the most emotional test possible, ending with her desire to be euthanized."

MYSTIC RIVER
2003

- About childhood friends reunited by tragedy in an insular part of Boston: "I liked the book and the screenplay by Brian Helgeland. The way sometimes fate deals a bad hand, and it just keeps getting worse and worse, and there is nothing anyone can do. No amount of sane advice can stop the train."

THE OUTLAW JOSEY WALES
1976

- Starring Eastwood as a Missouri farmer out for revenge after the Civil War: "It was the first Western I had done in some time since the 1960s Leone movies. It came out in the '70s when the country was restless about Vietnam. It addressed the divisiveness of war, and how it can tear at heart and soul. But it also dealt with the rejuvenation of a cynic, re-instilling his life with purpose, and with a surrogate family."

UNFORGIVEN

- Eastwood as a retired gunslinger taking on one last job: "I loved the Unforgiven script. You had to get a ways into it before you knew who was the protagonist and who was the antagonist. Even the villains, with the exceptions of the renegade cowboys, had good points to their character, and had dreams. Little Bill (played by Gene Hackman) just wanted a peaceful life. He believed he was doing the right thing. The film dealt with issues — gun control, and the struggles people have "within." The hero went against instinct. It was a very rich story, involving loyalty to friends, family and rationalizing deeds. It was a very intelligent script."

At what point is gore a crime?

GRAHAM HUGHES/THE CANADIAN

▶ Special effects filmmaker Remy Couture, centre, demonstrates outside the Montreal courthouse with supporters.

It was like a scene from a Wes Craven movie Wednesday outside the Montreal courthouse.

There were about 20 demonstrators, dressed as ghouls and zombies, around the building to protest criminal charges being laid against a maker of gory films.

Remy Couture requested a jury trial and pleaded not guilty to charges of moral corruption and distributing obscene material, laid under Section 163 of the Criminal Code.

Police say they arrested Couture after international complaints about the extremely gruesome and realistic-looking violence on his website.

That site, innerdepravity.com, is temporarily shut down.

WHAT CARS WILL SOON SOUND LIKE

Sound Check

ALAN CROSS
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

The first time anyone offered drivers a chance to customize their musical experience beyond the radio was Chrysler. In the 1950s, they, for a brief time, offered an under-dash turntable. It didn't go over so well with the motoring public.

Since then, the standard AM radio grew to include FM, 8-tracks, cassettes, CDs and six- and 10-pack changers and satellite radio with many featuring displays that looked like they were designed by a Las Vegas casino. Mono became stereo. Four speakers became six, then eight, then 12 then … well, you know.

But all this is nothing compared to the revolution in automobile entertainment systems that's just starting to hit.

Consider this: Up to 25 per cent of smart phone/MP3 users already connect their devices to their car speakers. Given how awkward this process can be (FM transmitters, ugly cable connections), this is astounding. One in four!

When it comes to factory equipment, Ford has the early lead with their excellent powered-by-Microsoft Sync system. Want to know how Ford has managed to move so many vehicles in the last couple of quarters? Look no further than the audio systems they're offering in selected models. They've also just announced their AppLink system which will allow smart phone developers to seamlessly link their apps with Sync. It will be ridiculously easy to stream, say, Internet radio, from your smart phone through your Ford, complete with all sort of nifty hands-free voice commands. Ford says they've had more than a thousand proposals so far.

"It will be ridiculously easy to stream, say, Internet radio, from your smart phone through your Ford, complete with all sort of nifty hands-free voice commands."

Selected Audi vehicles offer always-on Internet through a 3G connection. That means you can be rolling down any road at any speed and be continuously connected to the Internet. What's more is that the Audi system creates a local Wi-Fi network within the car so that the kids can surf the web from their smart phones, iPads or laptops in the back seat.

GM, Volkswagen, Kia and a growing number of manufacturers are working on similar systems. Pandora has a deal with GM to get their streaming service into your next Chevy Malibu (but not in Canada, don't get me started on why not). Meanwhile, after market manufactures like Audiovox are touting car radio units that will stream tens of thousands of Internet radio stations.

This ain't your grandfather's AM radio. And it's way better than playing records in the car.

Suicidal man agrees not to jump if he can talk to rapper T.I.

GETTY IMAGES

Police got unexpected help talking a suicidal man down from an Atlanta skyscraper on Wednesday when rapper T.I. showed up.

Officer James Polite says the hip-hop star joined the crowd outside the 22-story office building in midtown Wednesday and told officers he wanted to help. Police said the man agreed to come down in exchange for a few minutes face-to-face with T.I.

"I told him it ain't that bad. It'll get better, to put the time and effort into making it better," T.I. said. "I just reminded him know that I know. It looks bad right now, but it can turn around."

T.I. said he heard about the situation on the radio and drove to the building to help. He recorded a video of himself on a cellphone and rescue workers took it to the man to prove the rapper was really there.

The good deed follows recent legal trouble for the rapper, who is due in court Friday for a parole hearing after being arrested on suspicion of drug offences last month in Los Angeles.

He's on supervised release after spending a year in prison on federal weapons charges.

Jonas bros cancel concert in Mexico

Disney stars the Jonas Brothers have cancelled a concert scheduled in the Mexican city of Monterrey because of security concerns.

Concert promoter Live Nation says the Oct. 21 concert was cancelled due to "a series of unfortunate events" in Monterrey and out of concern for fans.

Monterrey is Mexico's richest city and one of its safest, but a wave of drug violence has shocked residents. More than 400 people have been killed this year in the state of Nuevo Leon, where Monterrey is located.

One fan, Dharyus Ledezma begged the trio on their Facebook page to announce a new concert date. The Monterrey resident said she had been looking forward to seeing them since the show was announced five months ago. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Darius Rucker's album Charleston, SC 1966, debuts this week ● Hootie and the Blowfish mark their 25th anniversary

Darius Rucker has spent the last few years reinventing himself as a country star. He's had a platinum debut, No. 1 hits and his follow-up, Charleston, SC 1966, debuted this week.

Rucker hasn't forgotten what made him one of music's most bankable voices, though.

Hootie & the Blowfish celebrates its 25th anniversary this year.

Rucker said the band never really broke up — though they haven't recorded together since releasing Looking For Lucky in 2005.

They play together occasionally, including four dates this year, and bandmates see each other often. Rucker says the chemistry that helped them sell more than 25 million records remains strong.

"We could get together right now and have an album for you in three months," Rucker said. "We're all writing all the time. I was sitting down writing songs (recently) and I wrote a country song and then a song came out that sounded like Hootie, so I saved it for that."

Rucker's solo country turn has turned in to quite a run. His first country album, 2008's Learn To Live spawned three No. 1 songs, sold about 1.5 million copies and earned him a Country Music Association Award for best new artist.

Rucker's second act as a country music star is no surprise to Hootie guitarist Mark Bryan. He's been listening to his friend belt out country tunes since they met in 1985 when Bryan heard Rucker singing in the shower of their University of South Carolina dorm hall.

"The very first show Darius and I did together at Pappy's with an acoustic guitar, we did Family Tradition by Hank Williams Jr., which he's still doing in his solo country set," Bryan said.

After a few months, Rucker and Bryan decided to go for it and enlisted bassist Dean Felber and a drummer. Felber, who had played in a band with Bryan during high school, didn't really want to join but he said he'd fill in till they could find a permanent bassist.

"And it's amazing 25 years after asking Dean to play with us, we're still looking for a bass player and we're still in a band. That's pretty awesome," Rucker said.

Friends will celebrate Hootie & The Blowfish's 25th anniversary with a concert and art installation unveiling in Columbia on Thursday. It will be a cherished memory for Rucker, who admits many of his memories from the Hootie years are a "blur."

"We had just taken college and extended it a few years," he said. "Our tour was a travelling party every day. Every day, all day. I look back and I laugh, people will ask me things and they'll say things, and I'll say, 'I don't remember that.'"

▶ Character Mark Dexler, left, reaches for romance in Teletoon's The Dating Guy

Dating gets animated

The Dating Guy's lead lady-searcher chats about pick-up lines, date prep and the perfect woman

The Dating Guy, Teletoon's new series about dating, sex and friendship is about to shake-up Sunday nights. The animated series follows the adventures of four friends — Mark, Woody, Sam and VJ — on their weekly search for love.

Metro recently caught up with Mark Dexler, a character on the show voiced by Canadian actor Fabrizio Filippo, to find out how this man's hunt for "the one" is going.

You are searching for "the one." What qualities are you looking for in a woman?

The perfect woman to me is someone who is intelligent and independent and passionate about making the world a better place. But has to have really nice boobs.

What are some of your best pick up lines?

Imagine we're in a dance club I approach a lady...
Me: You wanna dance?!
Her: Not with you!
Me: I'm sorry, you misunderstood me! I said you look fat in those pants!

You're a pretty metrosexual guy. What are your grooming and wardrobe advice to other guys?

Don't forget to wash behind your ears. A lot of guys forget that.

Why do you think you've been unlucky in love so far?

See question number one.

Tell me about some of your most memorable dates.

I can't remember any of the memorable ones.

METRO

Along with some very talented Canadian voice actors, The Dating Guy will feature guests such as Russell Peters and Howie Mandel.

Ratings imply trouble for Twitter-to-TV sitcom • Creator Halpern remains confident

Justin Halpern knows that not everyone is supportive of a guy fortunate enough to turn a Twitter feed into a bestselling book and a prime-time network sitcom.

His good luck instantly breeds hostility, he says, "and it's kind of a justified feeling because it's just a Twitter page."

Hits on the Web haven't typically transferred well to TV (see quarterlife), but Halpern might be an exception.

His Twitter feed, S— My Dad Says, amassed a huge following (now more than 1.7 million followers) simply by quotes he relayed from his 74-year-old father, Sam Halpern, a classic curmudgeon with a penchant for expletives.

His similarly titled book debuted on The New York Times list of bestsellers. Then, the CBS sitcom starring William Shatner as Halpern's father premiered to 12.5 million viewers, more than twice that of 30 Rock.

▶ William Shatner stars in (Bleep) My Dad Says

Ratings for (Bleep) My Dad Says (the Twitter feed's title was changed for the CBS show) have since declined each week and reviews have been bad. But the show hopes it has cast off its novelty label and become one of the few Internet-to-TV success stories.

It hasn't been a smooth ride. The pilot, produced by Warner Bros., had to be reshot, and the part of the son was recast with Jonathan Sadowski.

The changes may have improved things, but critics were still unimpressed. The New York Times, for one, called it "a bad idea from the moment it was announced" and "a wholly generic sitcom so divorced from its source material that you have to pinch yourself."

The show is oddly old-school in its reliance on sitcom tradition. But to a certain extent, the Twitter feed that started it all was classically sitcomish: There's no more familiar TV trope than the crabby father.

One of the ingredients that set Halpern's Twitter feed apart was its vulgarity. His father's musings and advice are harsh. One of few examples without an offensive word: "Pressure? Get married when you want. Your wedding's just one more day in my life I can't wear sweat pants."

Halpern ended up living with his parents in San Diego after he got a job with Maxim.com and his girlfriend unexpectedly dumped him. In the book, he fleshes out the details of his life and his relationship with his dad, whom he describes as "the least passive-aggressive human being on the planet."

He started the Twitter account as a lark at the suggestion of a friend.

"I had no idea what to expect," he says. "It was just funny to tell my friends, 'Look at all these people that follow what my dad says.'"

Executive producers David Kohan and Max Mutchnick, creators of Will & Grace, were brought in to run the show. Halpern is a co-executive producer and writer.

The most notable change in the adaptation was sanitizing the vulgarity. The character based on Halpern, too, was turned from merely an onlooker into a son craving love and sympathy from his father.

▶ If you're having some guests over try this Baked Mushroom Topped Brie. And if you're staying in, try this Mushroom, Chicken and Leek Pot Pie.

Have fun with fungi

Prepare and chill the mushroom and brie topping to have on hand for spur of the moment entertaining. Baking and serving on oven-proof platter keeps the cheese warm while eating. For a full — and fast — meal, check out our mushroom pot pie recipe as well:

Baked Mushroom Topped Brie

Ingredients:

Baked Mushroom Topped Brie

- ½ lb (250 g) fresh sliced mushrooms (white or crimini)
- ½ cup (125 ml) coarsely chopped onions
- ¼ cup (50 ml) finely chopped walnuts
- 1 large clove garlic, sliced
- ½ tsp (2 ml) each dried thyme, rosemary and pepper
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) olive oil
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) balsamic vinegar
- 1 (200g) wheel cold Brie cheese
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) finely minced fresh parsley or chives (optional)

Mushroom, Chicken and Leek Pot Pie

- 1 lb (500 g) boneless, skinless chicken breasts
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) vegetable oil, divided
- 2 large leeks, white part only, sliced
- 1 lb (500g) sliced fresh mushrooms
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) dried tarragon
- 2 tbsp (25 ml) all purpose flour
- 3/4 cup (175 ml) chicken stock
- ½ tsp (2 ml) salt
- ¼ tsp (1 ml) pepper
- 1 9"/22cm deep dish frozen pie shell, thawed

Preparation:

1. Finely chop mushrooms, onions, walnuts and garlic, thyme, rosemary and pepper in food processor.
2. Heat oil in large skillet over medium heat; cook and stir mushroom mixture for 5-7 minutes or until all liquid has evaporated. Stir in vinegar and cook 1-2 minutes. Remove from heat and cool to room temperature; cover and chill.
3. At serving time slice the wheel of Brie in half horizontally and place cut side up on oven-proof serving plate or baking pan. Spoon the topping evenly on cut surfaces of Brie. Bake in 350F/180C oven for about 8-10 minutes or until cheese is beginning to melt. Sprinkle parsley or chives on top to garnish if desired. Serve with thinly sliced whole wheat baguette or plain crackers. Makes 12.

Mushroom, Chicken and Leek Pot Pie

Preparation:

1. Cut chicken into ¾-inch (2 cm) cubes. In large non-stick saucepan or deep skillet, heat 1 tbsp (15 ml) of the oil over medium-high heat. Cook chicken until lightly browned but still pink inside, about 3-4 minutes. Spoon into 6 cup (1.5 l) baking dish or deep pie plate.
2. Reduce heat to medium and add remaining oil to same pan. Sauté leeks, mushroom and tarragon for 2-3 minutes; cover and cook about 3 minutes or until vegetables are softened. Sprinkle in flour and stir to blend. Gradually stir in chicken stock, salt and pepper. Bring to boil and stir until thickened. Spoon mixture over chicken. Invert thawed pie shell over casserole pressing pastry edge to baking dish and crimp or flute the edges. Cut 3-4 slits in pastry. Bake in 425°F (220°C) oven for 20 to 25 minutes. Makes 4.

- Tartar sauce (optional)

Preparation:

1. In a shallow saucepan, bring 750 ml (3 cups) of water to a boil. Reduce to simmer and add catfish fillets. Simmer for about 10 minutes or until fish flakes when tested with a fork. Remove fillets from water, drain well and let cool.
2. Flake fish into a large bowl. Add onion, celery, red pepper, parsley and tarragon. In a small bowl, whisk together mayonnaise, egg and mustard. Stir into fish mixture until combined. Add 175 ml (3/4 cup) of the cracker crumbs to mixture and stir until well combined.
3. Place remaining cracker crumbs into a shallow dish. Using about 75 ml (1/3 cup) of the mixture, shape into desired shapes and coat both sides with remaining cracker crumbs. Repeat with all the mixture to form 12 patties.
4. In a large non-stick skillet, heat about 30 ml (2 tbsp) of the oil over medium-high heat and pan-fry catfish cakes in batches for about 8 minutes, turning once, adding more oil if necessary, until golden. Serve with tartar sauce, if using. Makes 4 servings.

Oilers still can't win in St. Paul

Wild win their 14th straight home game against Edmonton

WILD	OILERS

Mikko Koivu scored two of Minnesota's four power-play goals and the Wild beat the Edmonton Oilers at home for the 14th straight time, 4-2 on Thursday night.

Antti Miettinen and Matt Cullen each had a goal and an assist for Minnesota, which tied the longest current home winning streak against a team. Nashville has beaten Columbus 14 straight times in Tennessee.

Niklas Backstrom stopped 24 shots to improve to 12-0-0 lifetime at home against the Oilers. Minnesota is 9-0-1 in home openers, winning the last nine.

Dustin Penner and Minnesota native Tom Gilbert scored for Edmonton, which has scored more than two goals just once during the St. Paul losing streak.

With Minnesota trailing 2-1, Koivu was all alone at the left edge of the crease for an easy tip of a pass from Cullen at 14:31 of the second period.

With Edmonton's Jim Vandermeer in the penalty box for an interference call two seconds after the ensuing faceoff, Koivu was credited with his second goal 52 seconds later after a goal-mouth scramble in which Edmonton's Ladislav Smid accidentally knocked the puck past Nikolai Khabibulin with his skate as the defenceman tried to clear Andrew Brunette out of the crease.

A slapshot by Cullen went off the toe of Gilbert's skate and into the Edmonton net for another power-play goal 7:37 into the third.

Seven of Minnesota's eight goals this season have come with the man advantage. Edmonton was successful on all nine of its penalty kills in its first two games, wins over Calgary and Florida.

Miettinen gave Minnesota a 1-0 lead with a power-play goal midway through the opening period, tipping a feed from Brunette behind Khabibulin.

Penner tied it on a power play early in the second, taking a feed from Ales Hemsky near the top of the slot and putting it between Backstrom' pads. It was Penner's second goal in two games.

Gilbert scored on a slapshot to give the Oilers a 2-1 lead midway through the second.

Canada finishes out of top three in India

For the first time in 48 years Canada failed to crack the top three at the Commonwealth Games, muscled off the podium by a mighty host Indian team the Canadians didn't see coming.

Riding the swell of a country's pride, India used homefield advantage that could have been Canada's to roar to an impressive 101 medals, including 38 gold.

"We did not anticipate our counterparts in India to do as well as they did," said Scott Stevenson, Commonwealth Games Canada's director of sport.

74 Number of gold medals won by Australia, which finished with 177 medals overall. England was third with 37 golds.

"We knew they would do better than they did in Melbourne (India won 50 medals four years ago) but we didn't anticipate them virtually doubling their medal count," Stevenson added.

Canada's team of 251 athletes finished fourth, winning 75 overall and 26 gold. The overall medal total, which also included 17 silver and 32 bronze, was a slip from the 86 captured four years ago in Melbourne.

Lee could be the difference

Texas starter may be just what the Rangers need to finally overcome Yankees in the playoffs
Philadelphia's pitching trio makes it a favourite to reach World Series again this season

Who's up for watching the Philadelphia Phillies take on former ace Cliff Lee in the World Series?

That's one of many intriguing possibilities with the baseball playoffs now down to four teams, and the one this observer feels is most likely to happen.

Thanks to Lee, who dominated Tuesday's decisive Game 5 against the Tampa Bay Rays, the Texas Rangers won their first ever playoff series and advanced to the American League Championship Series versus the New York Yankees, rekindling a one-sided rivalry from a decade ago.

Having lost division series to New York in 1996, '98 and '99, the difference this time may very well be Lee, who won both games for the Phillies last year when they fell in six games to the Yankees in the World Series.

The Phillies traded Lee last December in order to get Roy Halladay, the long-time Toronto Blue Jays ace who threw a no-hitter in his playoff debut. Feeling they were thin on pitching, the Phillies also picked up Roy Oswalt from the Houston Astros during the summer to dramatically boost their rotation that also includes 2008 World Series MVP Cole Hamels.

H2O, as the trio has been dubbed, will be front and centre in the National League Championship Series against the young guns of the San Francisco Giants. Tim Lincecum, Matt Cain, Jonathan Sanchez and Madison Bumgarner starred against the Atlanta Braves, but the Phillies lineup will pose a much sterner test.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

ALCS
First game:
Friday, 6:07 p.m.
Lowdown:
The Yankees rotation is still far from stable behind CC Sabathia, as they can't be sure what they'll get from Andy Pettitte (coming off groin injury), Phil Hughes (workload concerns) and A.J. Burnett (inconsistent) on any given night.
The Rangers feel a bit safer on that front with C.J. Wilson, Colby Lewis and Tommy Hunter, which means their lineup may not need to do the same heavy lifting New York's does.
Pick: Rangers in seven

NLCS
First game:
Saturday, 5:57 p.m.
Lowdown:
The Philadelphia lineup boasts the likes of Ryan Howard, Chase Utley, Jayson Werth, Jimmy Rollins and Shane Victorino, and should grind down the San Francisco four far more than the depleted Braves. At the same time San Francisco's offence is less productive than that of the Reds.
Buster Posey, Cody Ross, Pat Burrell and Aubrey Huff had a tough time versus Atlanta, and it's only going to get harder for them.
Pick: Phillies in six

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20
Being the go-getting Aries you are you may be tempted to make a hurried decision, but deep down you know it needs to be dealt with slowly and deliberately.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 You have been working extremely hard these past few weeks and have reached the point where if you push yourself much further it could damage your health.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 You are in the mood to take a few risks and, yes, they may well pay off. Risk is one thing, foolhardiness quite another.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22
Someone is making unfair demands of you and seems to believe that you will do as they say because you are timid and scared of creating a scene.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 You cannot expect other people to be reasonable today but you must be reasonable yourself.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 Go on the attack today. Let the world know that you will never allow yourself to be pushed around. With Mercury, your ruler, linked to ego planet Mars you'll find just the right words to make your point forcefully.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Both in your personal life and professionally you want only the best and will do whatever it takes to get it. That's great, but make sure the goals you are aiming for are your goals, not goals you have inherited from other people.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 . The simple fact is you can't do it all, so identify your number one goal and go after it with everything you've got.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 Try not to let slip information that rivals, competitors and enemies (yes, you have a few) can use against you.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 It may be hard to walk away from a situation where you feel hard done by today but that is exactly what you must do. Leave it behind.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18
Take care not to overreact to what someone says about you today. You won't make things better by sparking off a war of words. Pretend it means nothing to you. Your indifference will hurt them more than your anger.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 It may annoy you that someone just doesn't get what you are trying to tell them but what can you do? The simple fact is they lack your sensitivity, and that's a reason to pity them rather than to condemn them.
